Definitions

Surveillance is the monitoring of a place, person, group, or ongoing activity in order to gather information.

Overt surveillance is where the individual being monitored would reasonably be aware of the surveillance occurring. For example, visible CCTV cameras with clear signs saying that they are in use.

Covert surveillance is where the individual being monitored would not reasonably be aware of the surveillance occurring. For example, the use of hidden audio recording devices for a time-limited and specific purpose.

Background

St Michael's Clinic installed Overt CCTV, predominantly to the external areas of the building and car park in 2015/2016 following an incidents of theft and loitering including drug abuse, outside of the building at night. Cameras are also installed in the reception area and waiting room areas internally. There are no hidden cameras within the building and no cameras in any clinical areas.

The Policy

Clear notices are displayed for the public and staff to see. There is no facility for audio recording.

The images are stored securely on the computer system in a secure part of the building. The CCTV system is password protected. Images can be viewed on request by members of the public or staff for a period of up to three months at which point they are over-written. These images are kept purely for the detection of criminal activity or in or around the clinic building, particularly at night and for the protection of staff. Three months was felt sufficient to be aware of any incident that had taken place, Only trained staff have access to the CCTV system.

These images are not used to monitor staff work patterns or behaviour. Images are not viewed unless an incident has occurred and are overwritten by new images after a period of three months. No third party is involved and images are not stored externally.

The Information Commission was informed in writing when the CCTV was installed in the clinic.
